PECK'S BAD BOY AND HIS PA.

The Boy Tells About His Pa and the Minister—Also About Getting on the Wrong Road.

Peck's son.

"Say, you think of about everything mean there is going, don't you," said the groceryman to the bad boy, as he came in to show that his black eye had been cured. The minister explained to me yesterday how you caused him and your father to lay and soak in the water for about three hours, one hot day last summer, in the lake, and they both blistered their backs. The minister says the skin has not stopped peeling off his shoulders yet. What caused you to play such a mean trick on them?"

"O, it was their own fault," said the boy, as he looked with disdain on a watermelon that was out of season, and had no charms in October. "You see, the night the sociable was at our house, the minister and some of the deacons were up in my room, which they used that night for a smoking room, and while they were smoking they were telling stories about what fun they had when they were boys, and I remember one story the minister told about finding some girls in swimming once, and stealing their clothes, and making them wait till night, and then a girl had to fix herself up with newspapers and go home and send a wagon after the rest of the girls. The minister thought it was awful cunning, so when the church had the picnic last summer on the bank of the lake, I remembered about it. Beats all, don't it how a boy will remember anything like that? Well, after dinner I saw pa whisper to the minister, and they took a couple of towels and a piece of soap, and started off up the lake about half a mile, and I knew they were going in swimming. Well, it didn't take me very long to catch on. I got an overdress that one of the girls had been wearing to wash dishes, and a shawl, and stole a hat belonging to the soprano of the choir, and a red parasol that a girl left under a tree, and I went down in the woods and put on the clothes, over my pants and things, and when pa and the minister had got in the water and were swimming around, I put up the parasol and tripped along the shore like a girl picking flowers, and when I came to the stump where they put their clothes I didn't look toward the water, but acted tired, and sat down on the stump and began to fan myself. You'd a dide to see pa look. He crawled up on the beach, in the shallow water, and said, 'Elder, do you see that?'"

The elder looked, with himself all under water except his head, and said, 'Merciful goodness, squire, we are in for it. That interesting female is going to sit there and read a novel through before she goes away.' I peeked through the fan and could see all they said, while I pretended to read a novel. They swam around and made a noise, but I was deaf, and I thought it wasn't any worse for me to sit on the stump than it was for the minister, when he was a good little boy, to steal the clothes of the girls. I stayed until I got tired and didn't hear them when they hollered to me to go away, and after a while they got water soaked and had to do nothing, so the minister broke off a piece of a tree and dressed himself in it, and came up towards me, and said, 'Madam, excuse me for troubling you, but if you will go away while I get my clothes, I will take it as a favor.' I pretended to be insulted, and got up and walked off very indignant, and went back to the picnic and returned the clothes, and pretty soon they came up, looking as red as if they had been drinking, and the picnic was ready to go home. Somebody told pa it was me, but I don't know who it was that gave it away. Anyway, he chased me clear out of the woods with a piece of sapling. That was the time I told you I was too tired to ride, and walked home from the picnic. Pa has forgiven me, but I don't believe the minister ever will. Don't you think some of these pious folks are awful unforgiving?"

"O, people are not as good as you and I are," said the grocery man, as he watched the boy making a sneak on a bunch of grapes. "But did you go to the circus?"

"Circus? Well, I should assimilate. It is a wonder I am not there yet. But whatever you do, don't ask pa if he was at the circus, 'cause he will kill you. You see pa and I drove up to the race track, where the circus was, in the evening, and after the circus was out, we waited to see the men take the tents down and after they had gone, we started to drive home. It was darker than a squaw's pocket, and I drove out on the race track, and the old horse used to be a racer, and he jerked up his ears. Pa took the lines and said he would drive, 'cause we were out late, and ma would be nervous. I told pa I didn't believe he was on the right road, but he said he guessed nobody could fool him about the road to town, and bless me if he didn't drive around that track about eight times. Every time we passed the grand stand, which pa couldn't see, on account of his eyes, I laughed, but I thought if he knew the road go confounded well I could ride as long as he could. After we had rode around the track about eight miles, and I was getting sleepy, I mildly suggested that maybe we had better stop at a house and inquire the way to town, and pa got mad and asked me if I took him for a fool. Then he drove around a couple of times more, and the man that keeps the track he came out with a lantern and said 'hello!' Pa stopped and asked him what he wanted and he said, 'O, nothin', and pa drove on and told him to mind his business. We went around the track again, and when we got to the same place the man was there, and I guess pa thought it was time to inquire the way, so he pulled up, and asked the man what he was doing there, and the man said he was minding his own business. Pa asked him if we were on the right road to town, and the man said if we wasn't in any hurry he would like to have us drive on the track all night, as it was a little heavy, and he wanted to get it in condition to speed the colts the next day, but if we had to go we could drive out the gate and take the first left hand road. Well, pa was mad, and he wanted to know why I didn't tell him we were on the track, but I told him he seemed to know it all and it was dangerous to advise a man who knew it all. He didn't speak all the way to town, but when we put out the horse he said, 'Hennery, if this thing gets out your pa will have the reputation of being drunk. If you tell of it you are no friend of mine.' So I shall not say anything about it, 'cause it is a mean boy that will go back on his pa."

And the boy went out whistling "She's a Daisy."

The railroad war out of Chicago is still unsettled.

There are eight papers in Kentucky edited by colored men.

The famous imported stallion Prince Charlie has arrived at Lexington in good condition.

The report that Lieutenant Greeley, the Arctic explorer, was murdered, is not credited.

Mrs. Langtry will sail for New York on Saturday. She will be accompanied by her mother.

Says the Lexington Press: Hon. Phil B. Thompson has returned to Harrodsburg and will announce himself as a candidate for re-election to Congress.

Secretary Folger is of the belief that a two-per-cent long bond could be floated at par, and he may recommend the issuing of such a bond to Congress.

The captain of a whaler just arrived at Dundee, Scotland, reports that he had an interview with natives near Dalrymple Rock, and they stated that they saw a party of white men east of Smith's sound who were supposed to belong to Lieut. Greeley's party.

The Confederate Soldiers' Home founded at Georgetown some three years ago, has been broken up, owing to lack of support by the friends of "the lost cause." The receipts were enough to keep the institution running, but not to pay off a debt of $5,000 incurred for the property. The inmates are dispersing in various directions.

The Post Office Department has just had its attention called to an ingenious method of raising the figures of the new postal notes. The plan consists in punching from a high figure in the note a piece of paper of the proper shape and size to fill up the hole previously punched by the postmaster through a lower figure. The written words or figures are then removed by acids, and blank filled in to correspond with the punched figures. Some of the notes have been changed so skillfully that it is very difficult to detect the alterations.
